Course Description

MAT 296 is the second course in a three-semester sequence in calculus. This sequence is designed for students who intend to take more advanced courses in mathematics. This course covers techniques of integration, improper integrals, polar coordinates, sequences and series (including power series, Taylor and Maclaurin series).

Course Information

- Required Text: Essential Calculus: Early Transcendentals, Second Edition by James Stewart
- Course Instructor: Dr. J. Theodore Cox, 311B Carnegie Hall, 315.443.1488, jtcov@syr.edu
- Course Supervisor: Dr. Claudia Miller, 300A Carnegie Hall, 315.443.1493, clamille@syr.edu

Recitation Expectations

While course material will be covered during lecture hours, your opportunity to ask questions in a smaller group setting occurs during recitations. The beginning of recitation will typically be open to questions anyone has from the lecture hour, textbook, or homeworks followed by discussion or group problems to practice course concepts. Weekly course quizzes occur during the recitation hour, typically at the end of class so your attendance of recitations is essential. While homework is not collected during the course, your doing the problems allows you to ask questions during recitation about any difficulties you may have had in completing the problems. Finally consistent with the class syllabus, cell phones and other electronic devices (with the exception of 'standard' calculators) will not be permitted during recitations.
